

Kelly Garden

2645 W Sunnyview Road, Appleton

This English cottage-style garden is a haven for the birds, bees, and butterflies. Garden rooms filled with native perennials such as a purple coneflower, Joe-pye weed, monarda, and multiple varieties of milkweed draw monarchs, red admirals, and swallowtails to feed. Make discoveries in the labyrinth-like backyard with displays of shade and sun-loving varieties on this large lot next to a creek. Among the garden rooms are a sustainable vegetable garden and a pond with fish, both with a stone sentinel guarding the space.

M&M Miller Garden

2010 Palisades Drive, Appleton

Majestic pine and oak trees lining the driveway welcome you to come explore. Garden beds with mature trees, poppies, and peonies grace the front lawn. You might think you know what to expect, but it probably isn't the urban farmstead in the backyard, complete with a chicken coop. This all organic garden includes 12 raised beds and more teeming with vegetables, fruits, and herbs. There are red and black currants, blueberries, gooseberries, and a row of apple trees. There are pickles, sweet potatoes, onions, collard greens, and different varieties of tomatoes and peppers, many grown from seed. Don't miss exploring the tropical plants on the patio and in the greenhouse, where the homeowner grows his own pineapples!

Hausserman Garden

1560 Palisades Drive, Appleton

Take a walk along the winding paths through a magical forest where trees are all different colors, shapes, and sizes. This 3-acre lot on the Fox River boasts multiple garden beds with unusual tree varieties such as a Cornelian cherry, a sweet gum, a tricolor beech, and a Carolina Sweetheart variegated redbud. Every tree is different from the next. Under the trees grow woodland plants and flowering perennials such as iris, peonies, day lilies, and rhododendron.

Guided tours of this garden will run at 10:30am and 1pm.

J&T Miller Garden

N9444 Andrew Drive, Appleton

Colorful annuals in creative containers make this garden Pinterest worthy. Enter the backyard through an arbor created from an old ladder. Follow the stone path over the streams leading to a sunken pond with goldfish, koi, and the occasional bullfrog. Lily pads, canna, and Louisiana iris grow in the pond. Take your time and relax to the sounds of bubbling streams while taking note of the unusual garden art and magnificent sleeping swing. Blooming annuals artfully placed in the garden make old cookware, boots, and a chimney beautiful again.

Asman Garden

N251 Hank Drive, Appleton

This tidy garden is picture perfect with layered garden beds, colorful annuals, and unusual plants such as a crape myrtle and a tricolor European beech tree. Gardening is about experimentation, and these homeowners embrace that by taking a chance on new varieties and moving plants when conditions change. An element of Wisconsin farming history is present with an antique plow, wagon, and an impressive corn crib gazebo. Don't miss the opportunity to check out the innovative rain barrel system that funnels water to multiple spigots in the back and front yards!

Friends of the Scheig Center Gardens

Established in 2014, this all volunteer group hopes to continue to expand and offer programs and events that encourage public interest, appreciation, and support of the gardens and foster future generations to enjoy and understand gardening and nature. The gardens are maintained by volunteers. Friends of the Scheig Center Gardens are dedicated to the preservation, sustainability, and enhancement of the gardens. The Scheig Center Gardens, located at 1313 Witzke Blvd, maintain a native rose garden, a serenity butterfly garden, a native wildflower garden, a fragrance garden, a Veterans memorial garden, and a water feature. All gardens are free and open to the public from 5 am to 11 pm daily.
